

CORRUPT

Money, the root of all evil? Sounds about right but don't forget the power, privilege, conspiracy and blackmail that go along with that money. A sweet deal, a couple of gold bars, some bitcoins and a well-kept secret, or all the above. White collar criminals, gangsters and corrupt officials can all be relied on to conspire when necessary, or do as they are told, and it usually comes down to money. Thankfully, the system is pretty good at dealing with most of these guys, the exception would be for government officials who oversee making and enforcing the laws, where normal enforcement and seemingly insignificant legal loop holes can be custom tailored to match the desired offence.

Good lord politics, above all other organized crime activities, has got to be the holy grail for all the criminal underworld! Imagine a technically clean candidate brought into office with the money and expertise of a criminal syndicate. Now think of a bunch of them all working together! Holy crap, that sounds exactly like what is going on all over the western world where we are seeing the assault and exploitation of our cultures. With dictators, royalty, and single party systems you get what you get, but in our western world we must be conned or bullied into electing these puppets. That means big money, media propaganda, celebrity Judas, virtue signaling and suppressing free speech, (sound familiar?).

Who could possibly sell out their own country for money, well there are obviously a lot of them. However, there is one way to identify every one of these criminals, "the fallacy of their arguments". Foreign money, criminal money, terrorist money etc., it's all the same, whatever we are dumb enough to believe in can put any of these "officials" in power. I guess I'm just sick of seeing western politicians worldwide, stand up in front of a camera to present completely groundless arguments. It's like, "I'm not guilty of treason because bla bla bla", saying something that makes no sense and simply does not add up, and there is not much we can do about it until they are removed from office.

What Berny, Barry & the far-left politician's worldwide all have in common is bad math. If it were anything but math you could say, honest mistake or difference of opinion. However, math is absolute and it's either right or wrong and anyone with a calculator that can handle amortized interest can figure that out. A nice low variable interest rate is wonderful until the other shoe drops and you realized you have been conned in the game of underhanded chess.

Corrupt politicians know that organized crime will reward them to such an extent that the integrity or retention of their public office is of no consequence. The criminals don't care how bad or weak the candidates are because its private interest they are after and they are recruiting where ever possible, just like any other dirty business. Now we have an international crime ring meddling in our local politics and these UN globalist and Soros socialist are nothing but mercenaries for a world controlled by an unelected and unaccountable criminal syndicate. Their simple plan is to buy enough political influence so that they may proceed with strip-mining the freedoms and equity from every last citizen of the world, and if you think that can't happen here, just look at what they have already done to Europe, (Canada & LA).

My guess is that, close to 40% of our elected US politicians need to be voted out of office, and in Europe it is much higher than that. We need a lot more, light & oxygen on this mess and a much closer look at these public officials with bad math skills, before the next election...
