

EURO

The European Union or the EU is one of the 20th centuries great success stories, or not? The EU does offers a good test case for the “New World Order” or a world ruled by special interest, lies and deceit. The EU may have been the first step by a rotten .1%, to consolidate world power & wealth, by any means necessary. These guys have gambled their credibility and lost, so now we see Antifa and all the other blossoming idiots mobilized as a last gasp effort to stay in power. After BREXIT and the “Bush/Obama/Hillary” loss of 2016, it’s clear that some of these guys have also lost their minds.

We should all be grateful to the EU because it is something that none of us would want to do again without reviewing the lessons learned from this failing institution. I work for global companies dealing in commodities worldwide and I have seen the EU’s attempts to become “just like the United States” in the words of my old Swiss boss, who was not happy. I thought it wasn’t such a bad idea, but never understood how it worked.

As a professional in the global trade business, I have watched this thing slowly come together and now begin to unravel. First to go were the 15 or 20 different currencies we used to calculate prices and rates of exchange for US dollars. These were slowly replaced by the Euro and the national currencies have almost been forgotten in today’s global trade markets. Swiss francs, British pounds and German marks are only rarely used today since great masses of Euros are so much easier to come by. The rest of the world muddles along autonomously with their own national currencies.

For my part it’s all the same, we download the daily exchange rates for all counties and convert to US dollars accordingly. The European Union is still seen as independent countries, and from the outside looking in, there is absolutely no difference from a US trade perspective. However, judging from the news coming out of Europe, this beautiful, mythical place is becoming extremely unstable, at its foundation. The United State has a truly inspired Constitution built on a solid bedrock of Christian, humanitarian ideals and I am just not sure the EU had any of that in mind when they drew up their unifications plans. I’m no scholar but to me this “malfeasance”, was bought & paid for behind closed doors, with some sort of a treaty, and a media blitz, promising more prosperity than Berny Madoff’s best investment plan.

Western civilization is made up of free and independent Christian societies, holding honest elections that give direct power of law to the candidates of their choosing who are held accountable for their actions, and this should not go un-cherished. Western society is the envy of the world and the target of every totalitarian despot with a chip on his shoulder. The fact that the United States has made it through our humble beginning to become a successful and powerful nation is due to the foundation provided in our constitution and the painstaking work for our founders. The very first pillar laid down was Freedom of Speech and the second was the Right to Bear Arms. I’m pretty sure that these greedy and corrupted totalitarian powers would have made easy pickings of us without these fundamentals. Europe (and Canada) needs to acknowledge this fact and decide if they will remain a part of the western world. The EU needs massive reforms, reorganization of leadership and souvenir independence for their members. The media does what they are told and we now know who they have been working for. I hope to get back to Europe someday so please figure this out soon, without a war.
