

NGO

Where I come from liberal is just another word for stupid and the proof is in the origin of the word. Liberal used to mean "loose and lack of moral restraint", until the left adopted it and now it means "irresponsibly generous" and "unethically openminded". Ever wonder why the left allies itself with Islam, it's because they share the same fundamental building blocks, lie, cheat, steal, rape, murder, anything you want, as long as you keep the beast in power. The left seems willing to destroy all of creation to maintain their power, (since we all want them so much). It's easy to destroy things that others have built and you could say that evolution is for the builders and revolution is for destroyers.

I honestly empathize with these young kids we see broadcasting their stupidity all over the world, and a lot less sympathetic for the adults who should have gotten over "stupid" a long time ago. However, these criminal organizations, with their NGO front groups, spewing out this poison need some serious attention. These are not such bright people, but they are "unbelievably" corrupt and most of us just can't see it. These politically motivated NGO's are being organized by private self-interest groups, be that a criminal syndicate and or hopeless political movement, and this is where our anger should fall... (Don't even get me started on the UN NGO's, which includes "all" of the world's most brutal and despot regimes, who can't even manage their own check books honestly, attempting to rule the world.)

Of course, it is the young people who are easiest to seduce as they are pushed into the counterculture by their more visceral counterparts. Here's another sad truth, anyone from a kid to a congressman can be conned or hijacked with a well-organized plan of attack and the right cast of unscrupulous characters. World leaders who shamelessly exploit their own people probably don't have much choice because the private interest who put them in power can destroy and take them out, the same way they put them in.

I guess the goal should be to "build" a more perfect world without "destroying" the lessons of the past. How do you build a beautiful world? Apparently, it is the obvious things that escape us, accountable government, human rights, fiscal responsibility, education, public works, trade, agriculture, building, science, technology, infrastructure, energy, water, and a skilled work force. Every country on earth is uniquely positioned to capitalize on good government, "if it were not for the private self-interest".

All I can tell you is that the NGO's are the private interest, and this is exactly why we have such misery in some of the more remote parts of the world. North Korea, the Middle East and much of Africa have all fallen to self-interest. Kim can't leave his house, the Arabs can't stand themselves and much of Africa and Venezuela, are on a death march, "all for the private self-interest". These countries need serious leadership and not the NGO puppets who have been flying around under the radar for so long.

Believe it or not these criminals are after us too! It doesn't matter how ridiculous they are, as long as we allow NGO's to operate behind the scenes, their pathetic pawns will continue tear down what was built by others. Our revolutionary brats have destroyed more than enough of our cultural sanity and are now among the most hated groups in America. Europe and Canada are not far behind in this conclusion and I believe these idiots have proven once and for all that civilization should be an evolutionary building process and not some diluted fantasy about new world order.
