

Sabotage;

I guess it's the virtuous who should prosper in a normal world of good, bad and indifferent people. What about our new upside-down world of far flung moralities, gender confusion and un-abiding, well paid arbiters, all trying to put points on the board. Better to just keep your head down and try to make sense if it because these are the drive by militias, and there are no suspects to hold accountable when a bad thing happens. Misfortune can come at anytime from anywhere because these guys will hide behind their rocks waiting to strike a point for the cause.

I can't believe where we are at with the adult nursery school we call politics. It's not so funny if you are on the receiving end of one of these overgrown brats, right? Which of these toddler's tantrums are we going to have to reel in and which do we leave to grow out of it. Luckily, we have that answer and it's the same old answer developed over thousands of years of human evolution.

Those people who are at risk to society need to be stopped, that's why we have laws and institutions. What does "at risk" mean, it can be a physical threat, conspiracy, economic sabotage or inciting riots and sedition of US laws. Well there is plenty of that stuff going on and the law is very clear, our freedoms don't include insurrection, sedition or treason but instead of simply shutting down these threats we are encouraging them. How the hell does this work, it's a simple system and we should all know the rules. So, what the hell has happened with management?

Hey guys enough is enough, I know for the last 10 or 20 years that the outgoing administrations have stuffed our government with some of the most power happy people in world history. These guys are aiding, abetting and pandering to a bunch of clueless, overgrown children and they need to be removed from their government positions. (BTW, the tail does not wag the dog; these militants we are seeing, need to be locked up and prosecuted). After Congress, the next place I would look is human resources. Wow, sorry to be so blunt but I think we would all love to see the test standards that the last administration used to hire and promote their devotees.

It's not just the IRS or the EPA or the State Department that willfully betrayed their public office under the previous administration. Unfortunately, it's much bigger than that and will require a linear view from top to bottom of all agencies. This is a simple pragmatic job and it needs to be done.

A lawless Department of Justice, where's that at? Let's just concede a couple of points, judges that don't follow the law need to be removed for the good of society. There is not a first-year attorney alive today that does not know how insanely corrupt or perverted the courts can be. When these judges clearly violate or misinterpret the law for personal or political reasons, they need to be removed.

Last but not least, recent administrations pushed through some of the most treasonous policies that the United States will ever know. One of which may be the Information Technology grid that is used to regulate trade, count and collect the federal revenue and maintain the first line of defense at our borders. In my humble opinion, our previous administration would have done everything possible to make sure that these systems would be compromise, where ever possible.
